T. Scott Cowperthwait's practice focuses on complex commercial litigation, white collar criminal defense and corporate internal investigations, and cybersecurity and infrastructure protection issues. Scott represents individuals, public, quasi-public and private corporations, federal contractors, and health care providers, pharmacies and pharmacists who are the subjects of state and federal administrative, civil and criminal investigations. Scott counsels clients on a broad range of issues involving health care fraud and abuse, frauds against the government, money laundering, organized crime and racketeering, unfair trade practices, and violations of the False Claims Act, Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, and antitrust and securities laws.

Scott's practice has also included counseling clients concerning cybersecurity, technology and infrastructure protection relating to critical infrastructure sectors, including telecommunications, transportation, electric power, banking and finance, gas and oil storage and delivery, water supply, emergency services and government operations. Scott is active in several public and private associations focused on sharing information and intelligence concerning national infrastructure and technology issues, which allows him to stay current on critical issues relevant to his practice. He is also co-author of Cyber Law Tracker, an online newsletter providing updates on legal developments in cybersecurity and infrastructure protection.

Prior to joining Pullman & Comley in 2006, Scott practiced at a boutique firm which specialized in complex commercial litigation and white collar criminal defense and corporate internal investigations.
