Boris Greenshpun is a litigation manager responsible for implementing, coordinating and promoting litigation support services and technology across the firm. With more than eight years of experience, he develops and implements a framework of technology resources and services necessary for an e-discovery life cycle, from initial consultation to document production. Boris works with attorneys, paralegals and IT staff to gather project requirements, communicate progress, create documentation and provide e-discovery and trial support. He also facilitates the integration of best practices into existing workflow, ensures efficient case and data management planning, develops defensible collection policies and administers document review and production. Boris is fluent in Russian and Ukrainian.
