James T. (Tim) Shearin is chairman of the firm and former chair of the firm's Litigation Department. He has wide-ranging experience in federal and state courts at both the trial and appellate levels, and before arbitration and mediation panels. He uses that experience to resolve client problems as effectively and efficiently as possible, always with the client's end goal in sight. Because of this, clients turn to Tim when the stakes are critical and when their business is on the line. He represents clients in a wide variety of litigation matters: commercial and business, intellectual property, Internet piracy and computer crimes, banking, securities, antitrust, products liability and general civil litigation.

Tim has lectured and written on the following: the constitutionality of Connecticut's Prejudgment Remedy Statute, "ins and outs" of civil forfeitures, lender-liability law, federal discovery rules, implications of expert disclosure in federal court, limitations of technical advancements in the practice of law, rules and practices governing the U.S. District Court for the District of Connecticut, the means by which to secure federal judgments, medical malpractice liability for HMOs, defense of covenant-not-to-compete cases, Markman hearings, the federal jurisdiction of national banks, federal court practice and procedure, uses of expert witnesses, settlement conferences and mediation in the federal courts, case management, the art of written and oral advocacy, Connecticut jurisprudence on e-commerce contracts of adhesion, litigation affecting the banking industry settlement of shareholder derivative actions, the antitrust implications of "no poach" agreements between competitors, and LIBOR transition in the banking industry.

Tim is also an American Arbitration Association-qualified arbitrator and frequently acts as a privately-retained mediator. He is profiled in Financier Worldwide's 2016 Litigation & Alternative Dispute Resolution Handbook.
