June 7, 2012

Lee Hoffman was a member of a panel addressing unpredictable weather patterns and the threats associated with climate change, including the October 2011 snowstorm and blackouts across the Northeast, as well as the weaknesses these storms revealed in our region's infrastructure. This panel explored how communities are re-thinking sustainability with regard to energy and other infrastructure. Lee practices in the areas of environmental and energy law at Pullman & Comley and was appointed to the Two Storm Panel by Connecticut Governor Dannel Malloy.
