

Detecting Cybercriminals and Insider Threats

March 14, 2012

Just when you think you've adequately communicated your company's security policies to your employees and verified your network security settings, along comes a clever hacker committed to exploiting an attack vector into your company's technology systems. These attacks are no longer solely for financial gain. The individuals or groups behind these incidents are highly trained and sometimes government sponsored cybercriminals seeking financial, political, or personal gains. Making matters even worse, it could be someone that you work with. Pullman & Comley attorney T. Scott Cowperthwait discussed this growing problem as a moderated panel member.

Wednesday, March 14, 2012

Time: 8:00am - 4:30pm

The Connecticut Society of Certified Public Accountants (CSCPA)

716 Brook Street, Suite 100

Rocky Hill, CT 06067

For more information about this cybercriminal meeting, please click here

Practice Areas

Privacy and Data Security