

IN THE NEWS: Carrie Larson Comments on Wind Energy Projects in Connecticut

March 8, 2010

Connecticut Law Tribune

Pullman & Comley attorney Carrie Larson was quoted in a March 8 Connecticut Law Tribune article, "No Easy Breeze: Wind Energy Projects Face Legal, Regulatory Hurdles," about the challenges facing wind energy projects in Connecticut.

Carrie, who is working with BNE Energy on plans to establish Connecticut's first commercial wind farm in Colebrook, noted that such projects may encounter "bumps in the road."

"It really depends on the town and where [the project] is situated with the neighbors," she said. "This is the first commercial wind project in Connecticut, so there's an educational curve."

For more information, please contact info@pullcom.com.

Practice Areas

Alternative Energy

Regulatory, Energy and Telecommunications

Industries

Energy

Utilities